Here are pictures of the present Duxbury Yacht Club in its earlier days which were loaned to the Clipper by Wilma Simmons whose uncle Fred Simmons took them. He was a local builder whose hobby was photography. Top photo shows the club under construction. Next is the finished building without benefit of landscaping. Next an interior photo and below a view from the pier. Note the windmill down Mattakeesett Court and the house on the left, not standing there now. Harold Kellog, who summered in Duxbury was the architect of the building (He also was architect of the Duxbury Primary School).
